BILL BURNS DOES GOOD WORK

Big Southpaw Holds Browns to Five Singles, but Receives Little Support from His Teammates at the Bat-Man Left on Second and Another on Third in Ninth Inning.

Washington's ancient weakness, inabil-Ity to hit at opportune times, played such a prominent part in the proceedings at National Park yesterday that the St. Louis Browns copped the second game of the series by 2 to 1.

The Nationals made more hits and fewer errors than the Browns, and in

'Smith and Jack Powell were touched up freely, the two teams piled up twentyeight hits for nine runs, but yesterday only eleven safeties were made, and of these Washington got six. Graham, a southpaw, from Shreveport, in the Southern League, performed for McAleer, and the youngster looked about as good as any of the new pitchers who have visited here this spring. While inclined at times to be slightly erratic, Graham was the whole works when there were men on the bases, and while Washington made one run, even that tally was not earned. but was the result of an error by Jimmy Williams at second base.

Burns Holds 'Em Down. work. He let the Browns down with five scattered hits, only two of which came in any single inning, and with any sort of showing by the Nationals at the bat, Burns would have been returned a win-

From the first to the seventh inning the score was tied, but in the so-called lucky round, the Browns worked a man across the plate as a result of two singles and a sacrifice.

As both pitchers were going nicely that last tally looked as big as a Merry Widow hat, but in the ninth the Nationals showed some latent batting strength and place on the bases and immediately stole A single at this stage would have set the crowd wild, but Gehring, who batted for Burns, struck out and it was all over.
